

Urban Food Garden

Linnéstaden

City of Göteborg

Before

Granite foundation walls make up terraces on various levels, which in later years have been left to deteriorate due to a lengthy and ultimately failed planning process. The site was predominantly used by dog walkers.

Process

The project was designed in collaboration with its users through the growers association on the allotment area and the Gothenburg Dog & Cat Centre on the dogs' recreational ground.

Result

The Urban Local Food Garden is making better use of an iconic hillside site in an important part of the city while answering the need for gardens close to home or work.
